A CHART OF ENGLISH LITERATURE-NELSON AND HIS TIMES-A MAP OF THE SEAT OF WAR-MINOR MATTERS.

From data found in Stopford Brooke's "Eng-Bish Literature" Mr. J. B. Horner has compiled ingenious but rather dubious "Chart of minent Authors." which the Macmillans space into ten sections, each one devoted to an historical period, Mr. Horner fills them with vertical lines representative of authors. These heavy vertical lines intersect, according to the tance of the authors whose names are appended, certain horizontal lines which signify respectively the first, second, third or fourth relative merits of a handful of Elizabethan writers you turn to that period (the fourth in the row) and a black line soaring above all the Bacon's line. Sidney, Marlowe and Ben Jonson sink considerably, but they still hold themselves high above many of their contemporaries. It is a droll chart. Coming down to modern times Mr Horner, leaning confidently on his historian and critic, has no hesitation in placing Tennyscaling of De Quincey, Mrs. Browning, Charles Darwin, D. G. Rossetti, Matthew Arnold, Robert Stevenson, John Ruskin and Algernon Swinburne according to the same measure. the chart which would enable the student to grasp the distinctions existing between the authors just enumerated. Unless he had some experience he would get the impression that Arnold and Stevenson, De Quincey and Mrs. Browning, were of exactly the same rank in English literature. We cannot see what good purpose this chart can serve. It not only treats in a crassly mechanical way a subject which cannot stand that kind of treatment, but is so arbitrary and ill-considered that it can only mislead the uneducated.

A caustic critic of our political and social institutions, disguising himself behind the title of "A Diplomat," has published in "The Rise and Fall of the United States" (F. T. Neely) a diverting little pamphlet. He lashes the corruption of the present day, and prophesies complete collapse unless it is arrested. The picture of the best people in the United States overthrowing the wicked ones some centuries hence, only to bring Anarchy upon the country, is fantastic enough; but the author makes many shrewd remarks by the way touching social de- FAMILIAR LIFE IN FIELD AND FOREST terioration and the baser drift of politics, and the skit is readable, though unimportant.

"Nelson and His Times," a history and picture book of about two hundred broad pages, is a work popular in scope, by Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford and Mr. H. W. Wilson. The narrative is on the whole free from technical obscurities, and the general reader who has no to peruse Captain Mahan or any of the older authorities will find it not only interestdrawn largely from contemporary sources, and sonalities and scenes described run no risk of being misapprehended. The frontispiece, repre- garden senting the landing of Nelson at Copenhagen after the battle, is printed in colors.

The Scribners send us a convenient document for use among readers of newspapers to-day, 'Philips's Special Map Illustrating the Spanish-American War." This map, which folds into America as far down as Brazil, Europe and on a generous scale. Another section Indies, a third shows the Philippines, with reference to their neighbors, and a fourth displays There is also a small map of the Canary Islands.

The same publishers bring out the seventh volume of "The History of Frederick the Great." in the Centenary edition of Carlyle edited by

We have received from the Messrs, Durand-Ruel the catalogue of the Tabourier collection, sold in Paris this week. The sale is especially interesting as showing that despite the vigilance of the Great European museums, which contrive to secure most of the old masters that come into the market, there are still occasional opportunities for the private collector to obtain some famous names for his gallery. Delacroix, Rousseau and Millet, Fortuny and Meissonler, vere represented in the Tabourier collection. There were also examples of Clouet and Lanneau, Lancret and Watteau, Boucher and Fragonard, with some interesting pictures by Hans Holbein, Van der Weyden, Rembrandt, Guardi, Canaletto and Str Joshua Reynolds. The Kums be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, by the publishers, sale of old masters in Belgium was attended, we believe, by representatives of American collectors. It is to be hoped that the latter were also attentive to the dispersal of the Tabourier pictures. The Barbizon men and other French painters should not be the sole objects of our enthusiasm, and since the movement toward older schools has already borne excellent fruit, bringing to these shores pictures by the Dutch masters and the Englishmen of the last century, it ought not to be difficult for American competition to turn itself toward sales like those mentioned above.
